

Estancia Las Carreras near Tucumán

Landscape

The Las Carreras Jesuit Estancia is located in Tucumán province, in the northwest region of the Argentine Republic. It leans on the bottom of majestic hills that climb and fall between 8,530 and 14,764 feet. It is a beautiful place, where you can revisit the past where times were simpler and peaceful. The antique manor was built by the Jesuits around the year 1718, becoming a historical place of Latin America.

The Estancia was enlarged and renovated to provide the comfort that you are looking for, yet respects the careful style of such a noble construction. In 1779, it was acquired by a Frias Silva ancestor, to whom it still belongs. With almost 230 years, it is one of the oldest mansions in the Alchaqui valley, being an example of the great culture that has survived and been passed down. The estate was completely built with materials from the local area (adobe, straw, cane, alders). With the typical construction of the architecture of that time, all the rooms lead into central yards. The rooms have been decorated with typical regional weaves, trying to reflect 3 periods of the Valley's history: the one of the first population, the Inca and the colonial one.

Itinerary

Take flight from Buenos Aires to Tucuman. On our way to Estancia Las Carreras, we will visit Tucuman, founded in 1565. Before we head to Estancia Las Carreras, we are going to visit Tucuman and its main attractions. This modern city also conserves historical, religious and cultural symbols of past times. Tucuman's economy is mainly based on the cultivation and processing of sugar cane and it offers a remarkable variety of landscapes. We will then continue to Tafi del Valle, blessed by its mild temperature and its historic value. In this valley located at 2000 m.s.l. the Jesuits established centuries ago and its heritage can be seen not only in the old buildings left by them but also in the production of dairy products such that cheese. Transfer to Estancia Las Carreras for overnight stay.

Day 2

Day at leisure to relax and eat excellent food at this estancia. Las Carreras produces its own cheese which is their joy and pride; you don't want to miss it.

Note: If you wish to stay longer in this Estancia please add US$ 176.00 per night per room.
